3.1 Applying for Predoctoral Grants (aids, fellowships, contracts)

At the moment, and unlike what happens in Bachelor and Master studies, there are no national public scholarships to finance the enrollment of doctoral studies.

There are so-called predoctoral contracts (grants, aids, fellowships) that are employment contracts at UPV to carry out the doctoral thesis and to be trained within a research group of this University. These contracts are awarded in annual competitive calls, which are managed in each case by different institutions.

You can get more information related to predoctoral grants for the development of the doctorate in this link.
